Death of a Prominent Man.

Mr. J. M. Stevenson, Who Was the Wealthiest Man in Russell County Passes Over the River.

A CITIZEN WHO WILL BE MISSED.

Last Tuesday afternoon there went out from Russell county, one of her best known and most influential citizens—J. Marion Stevenson, who resided at Rowena, and who will not only be missed by his wife and children, but by the entire county.

The deceased was a man of the highest character, kind to every body, especially the poor and needy. His latch string was on the outside of his door, and it is said no man was ever denied bread and lodging at his home.

He was a man full of energy and by his industry he had accumulated a large estate—said to have been the wealthiest man in Russell county. He made his money by extensive farming, stock and lumber dealing. He was an ardent Mason and was buried by the fraternity.

It will be a long time before Russell county sees his like.

Peace to his memory, sympathy for the wife and children.

Thanks.

We take this means of thanking the people of Columbia who so nicely entertained us during our two week's stay in your nice little city. We can never forget the kindness and courtesy that was shown us by the many families that we visited. We will mention the nice dinner that was prepared by Mrs. V. Sullivan on the birthday of N. R. Roach which was heartily enjoyed, and will long be remembered by us. Wishing you all a long and prosperous life and hoping we may sometime in the future have the pleasure of welcoming each of you into our homes and that we may be able to return the same courtesy to you.

N. R. Roach,
J. M. Shive.

Farm for Sale.

I have a farm of 47½ acres, 40 acres in cultivation and 7½ in timber. 1½ miles from Columbia. I wish to sell at a bargain.

There are a few over one hundred pupils now in the Lindsey-Wilson and others will enter this week. A brick dormitory for boys is now assured, as over six thousand dollars has been raised to build it. It is said that it can be erected for eight or nine thousand—and the remainder of the money will be forthcoming. Columbia should feel proud of this school, as it is steadily building up the town. The principals are in fine spirits, and they say the indications point to the best year in the history of the institution.

A note from Miss Ethel Conover, dated Brackettville, Texas, September 29th, says: Please find enclosed fifty cents for which send me The Adair County News for six months. I miss my home paper so much, so please send it on just as soon as you get this. I am teaching in the Graded School here and I am well pleased with my position as teacher at this place. The climate here is delightful. I am in South-west Texas just 18 miles from the Old Mexico line.

Mr. J. W. Kearns, who lives four miles out of town on Greensburg road, met with a serious accident last Thursday afternoon. He was doing some work about his barn when the door slammed, striking him in the head. He was knocked senseless and it was several hours before he recovered. The blow cut a considerable gash.

The Glasgow Republican says that Mr. E. T. Willis and family will return from that city and take up their abode in Cave City. Mr. Willis having bought a half interest in the drugstore of his brother, Mr. M. O. Willis.

How cheaply can you heat your home with Cole's Original Wood Heater? Better ask—it will surprise you.

The wife of Mr. Sam Aaron, Russell county, died last Saturday night. She was a lady highly respected.

Mrs. Nora Ell's, about seventy years old, died in the Montpelier country, last Sunday night.

Church Attendance.

All church members should be in love with the organization to which they belong. They joined because the doctrine taught met with their approval, and it is encouraging to a pastor to see or to know members of his flock absent themselves without a tangible reason; and the only good reason for an absentee is that of sickness. All pastors of the various churches in Columbia are men of learning—not wearisome, but instructors, and persons who attend services to listen, invariably leave the house of God benefitted. The prayer meetings held weekly in this town are very sparsely attended, and it is the most helpful service of the week. Let all the church members of Columbia resolve to attend upon all the ordinances of their respective churches, and a warmer religious atmosphere will permeate the whole town. Follow this admonition. It would cause a glad smile to come over the face of your pastor and you would feel much better, knowing that you had done your duty. Occasionally you see members attending services at one church when preaching is in progress at their own. Attend upon your own church ordinances, and when it is not your day for services, go to some other house of worship.

Good Advice.

The Spokane County Good Roads Association, of Washington, has mailed out a card with this good advice on the upkeep of country roads:

"When your road gets too high in the middle, use your split log drag, both going and coming, the first round trip on the high part of the road. Please remove all loose stones from the roads in your districts.

"When you grade the roads and move some sod or other vegetable matter into the traveled portion of your road, be sure and remove it before the road becomes packed, or else you are bound to have a mudhole there in the spring and fall or a dusthole during the summer. This is a mistake that most road overseers make. They feel that after the sod is once covered, no bad results will follow, but the dead organic matter is bound to keep working under traffic, whether on the surface or under the surface, and make a mudhole or a dusthole.

"When your grade is completed, a level line across and touching the center of the road should be exactly the same height above either edge of your road.

"The best crown for the average dirt road should be one inch in one foot. If your road is graded twenty-four (24) feet wide, the center of your road should be twelve (12) inches higher than the edges of your road."

Mr. F. R. Winfrey, who has been a great sufferer for five weeks, the result of a fall, will in all probability get better, as Drs. Russell and Flowers, who were called last Friday, discovered upon an examination that his hip was broken. They put it in plaster parish and they think in four or five weeks the patient will be able to be out.

Assistant Road Engineers and Foreman, Notice.

The Governor, Hon. Jas. B. McCreary, has issued a call requesting the people of Kentucky to volunteer to work the roads for two days and has designated Friday and Saturday, Oct. 24th and 25th. It is expected that this work be done under the direction of the Road Engineer, his assistants and Foreman. Therefore, I write this to urge you to help get every thing in readiness for those two days. Where there is no Foreman on a road I urge that the Assistant Engineer now proceed to get some public spirited citizen to act in that capacity for this special occasion. Let us thoroughly organize the county for this work, and I would here suggest that we pick out some bad hill or other piece of bad road in each sub-division for special attention on those days. Another duty that I feel devolves upon us is to notify the people of this call and urge that they patriotically respond to it.

It seems to me that every good citizen of the county should help us in this matter not only by working on these two days, but by talking the matter up, so as to arouse public interest. The preachers would do well to regale their congregations with a discourse on good roads or bad roads as their fancy might dictate. Any way, they could get up an interest on the subject if they would only try, and I believe it is their duty to do so. What think you brethren?

I earnestly appeal to all good citizens to help make these two days memorable in Adair county. Let all who can furnish teams. And as it is possible that we will be short on tools, bring along your grubbing hoe, axe, spade or shovel or whatever will do to help better the road. Hoping that every body will respond to this call of the Governor. I am truly

J. N. Coffey,
County Road Engineer.

Married at Campbellsville.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. Denis Eubank, a merchant at Cane Valley, and Miss Bess Rice, of the same community, drove over to Campbellsville and were married by the pastor of the Baptist Church. The groom is a first-class gentleman, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Eubank. The bride is a daughter of the late Jo Rice, and is a niece of Mrs. Brack Massey and Mr. Geo. E. Wilson, this place.

Soon after the ceremony the couple returned to Cane Valley and received the congratulations of their many friends.

Entertained.

Mrs. L. C. Hindman entertained the following Friday to a 12 o'clock dinner: Mrs. W. H. Gill, Mrs. G. H. Nell, Mrs. C. S. Harris and two children, Mrs. George Coffey and daughter, Margaret. The afternoon was spent in music and social conversation. The day will long be remembered by all present.

We learn from Mr. A. D. Patterson, Sheriff of the county, that Jim Smith, the colored boy, sent to the penitentiary at the September term of circuit court, was not a stranger within the walls of the prison, as convicts commenced to greet him as soon as he entered. Upon inquiry Mr. Patterson learned that he had served two terms before the sentence in the Adair court.

Mr. Hugh Richardson will start his Midget mill the first of November. The place of business will be on the pike in the same building. Every precaution will be taken to make the best of flour, as all necessary improvements will be made.

One week from next Monday circuit court will commence at Jamestown. It is said that the docket is larger than usual, and that most of the time allotted will be taken up.

A representative of this paper will attend circuit court at Jamestown and will be glad to meet all friends of the publication.

On last Monday night, thieves entered the store of T. J. Bryant & Son, at Ozark, and quite a lot of cash was stolen. No clue to the robbers.

TO WORK ROADS.

Gov. McCreary Issues Proclamation for Betterment of Highways.

NAMES OCTOBER 24-25.

Gov. McCreary has issued a proclamation, "calling upon the people in every county of the State of Kentucky to work on the roads in their respective counties on Friday and Saturday, October 24 and 25, commencing in the morning at 8 o'clock each day and continuing until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The County Judge and Engineer of each county are directed to aid the people in complying with this request, and they are authorized to select such persons as may be needed to assist. In every where there is no Engineer, or where they fail to act the Sheriff or other persons are authorized to organize and comply with this proclamation."

The Governor says: "Good roads facilitate the labor of farmers in bringing their products to market, and increase the benefits of rural education by providing means by which the children of the State can go regularly to school, and furnish a better and easier way to go to church and greatly enhance the value of farm lands. This proclamation refers to dirt roads, turnpikes and gravel roads. As Kentucky always takes the lead, and as Kentuckians desire the betterment of our highways, they must come forward with enthusiasm and energy and show the people of other States that they can equal or surpass them in the improvement of their roads."

Killing in Clinton.

Last week near Ill Will, Clinton county, James Means shot and killed Lock Lowhorn. It is said that the parties were drinking and previously had been good friends as far as is known. The shot struck Lowhorn just above one of his knees, passing through and causing his death in a short time. Lowhorn is the second man Means has killed. About five years ago he shot and killed Jim Tom Lee in this county during a quarrel, when John Allen Lee and his son attacked Means. Means was shot at that time, but recovered. About four or five weeks ago, Means was shot by John Allen Lee and was just recovering from that shot.

The Adair Spoke Company, located here about one year ago, has done a good business from the start. It did not commence turning spokes until some time after the plant was located, and since it has been here 350,000 spokes have been turned and shipped to market, and there are now 200,000 on the yard. The timber used is hickory and oak. The company seems to be perfectly delighted with its location. Mr. Eugene Wetlington is the local manager.

I will sell about 4 acres of land being a part of the lot on which my residence is located. No more desirable location in or near Columbia.

In this issue an article will be found from Gov. McCreary, who suggests how to make our roads better throughout the State, and to do the work quickly. Read it and when the days come that he has set apart for the work, act. With hands sufficient, two days on the roads in every county in the State, would bring about great improvements.

Mr. Green McKinley and his wife, Rachel, are evidently the oldest couple in the county. They reside near Glenville. Mr. McKinley was born February 28, 1826, and his wife April 1, 1824. They were married February 25, 1845, and to the union eight children were born, Mr. Solomon McKinley being one of the number, who is now an old man. They were the grandparents of 74 children and 105 great grand children. While these two old people have passed nearly ninety years each, are in good health, and may reach the century mark.

Things to Do.

If you can't own the town don't own it.

This life is what we make it: so is this town.

In some respects this town is not perfect; are you?

What this town needs isn't fault-finders, but fault fixers.

This town will never grow on money sent to some other town.

The country is growing in population; is this town keeping up?

The man who begins to plan for this town will soon be calling it "my town."

This town had to be started by somebody; it has got to be kept going by somebody else.

This town doesn't need boasting any more than any other town, but it needs it just as much.

The pioneers thought this was a good place for a town; let's make it a poor place for knockers.

The easiest way to make things right at Washington is to begin by making things right at home.

Remember there is one big difference between this town and all other towns. This town is where you live.

If you are a wage earner here, this town spends its money with you; do you spend your money with the town?

A Frankfort dispatch to the Louisville Post says: The Metcalfe Circuit Court was reversed in the case of Henry S. Vansant against W. W. McPherson in an opinion by Judge Turner. Van Zant, McPherson and W. D. Albright were Republican candidates for the nomination for nomination. Vansant was given the certificate and the others contested. The lower court held that the evidence showed the polls were held open after hours, and Vansant thereby received sixty-five more votes than he was entitled to, in evaluating the result in that precinct, and giving the nomination to McPherson. The reversal was on the ground of too conflicting evidence as to the time of closing the polls to permit of a positive conclusion.

Sponges for Fertilizing.

The department of agriculture, through its bureau of soils, has recently completed analysis of the loggerhead sponge, which grows abundantly in the waters of Southern Florida, to determine its value as a fertilizer. This sponge, according to Mr. Thomas E. Reedy of Key West, grows in countless thousands and to an enormous size in shallow water, where it is easy to procure. Mr. Reedy also states that the farmers of the Florida Keys use the loggerhead sponge with wonderful results, and hardly ever use chemical fertilizers. Dr. H. F. Moore of the United States bureau of fisheries cites the use of this sponge by citrus fruit growers of the Florida mainland and states that he has seen this sponge growing in such quantities that he has long thought it should be exploited.

A specialist of the department recently made analyses of samples from Key West which verify the value of this sponge as a fertilizer. The analyses show that the approximate results on air dry material show four per cent. of nitrogen, three quarters of one per cent., each of potash and phosphoric acid, five per cent., of lime and 40 per cent., of organic matter. The specialists say that it is evident from the composition of this material and its demonstrated efficiency as a fertilizer that it has considerable value to farmers and fruit growers who have easy access to it in the shallows of the sea. The department is conducting further investigation to determine the feasibility of extending the use of this sponge as a fertilizer.

Wedding Ring on Foot.

At Eastbourne, England, resides a woman probably without an equal in the world. She was born minus arms, yet she can do almost anything with her feet. Her name is Mrs. Pierce, and recently she attended a dinner given to the old people of the town by the local Lodge of Buffaloes.

She surprised everybody present by placing her feet upon the table, and picking up her knife and fork with marvelous dexterity commenced to enjoy the feast. She manipulated the knife and fork quite as well as any ordinary person would with her hands, and although she looked very uncomfortable with her feet on the table, she was quite at ease.

One had to look very closely to discern that Mrs. Pierce was actually using her feet, and had anyone been looking 'round and had not known of her infirmity, the would have passed without noticing anything, so natural did she look.

As a housewife, Mrs. Pierce is truly wonderful. She cooks the dinner, cleans the house; in fact, she fulfills—and very creditably, too—almost all of the duties of a housewife. She has had seven children, but of these six have died. The seventh, however, is married, and Mrs. Pierce is now a grandmother. The other children did not die early, and up to the time of their deaths, Mrs. Pierce did not require any assistance in order to adequately attend to them.

This unique woman wears her wedding ring on the left foot. When she was married she was asked if she would care to sit down for the bridegroom to place the ring on the toe, but she refused, and lifted her foot to the level of her husband's waist with the greatest of ease, the necessary performance was successfully carried out.

Then, again, Mrs. Pierce can write excellently with the left foot and can perform the art of needlework to a wonderful degree of excellence. She works with the left foot and guides the material with the right.

When asked to "hand" anything, Mrs. Pierce does so with perfect ease and comfort. Should the article asked for be on the sideboard or on the piano, her foot would leisurely lift itself up to that particular place, and request would be fulfilled.

It is said that Mrs. Pierce's feet are far more capable than the hands of some people.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

Appetizing Dishes.

A most satisfying and good looking dish is this: Brown a few slices of onion in a little butter, then add a half cup of cold cooked rice, and when well browned three slightly beaten eggs and a half cup of milk. Stir until the eggs are cooked, sprinkle with a slice of finely minced boiled ham, and serve at once.

Cream cake—Bake cake in two layers, and put together with sweetened whipped cream which has been flavored with a cup of peach pulp put through a fine sieve. Flavor with a few drops of almond.

Coffey Junket.—For a simple and dainty dessert, and one which is easy to make, junket certainly stands high in favor. One tablet dissolved in a tablespoonful of water and added to a quart of milk is sufficient to thicken that amount. Reserve a half cup of milk, and pour boiling hot over two tablespoonfuls of ground coffee; let stand until well infused, then strain. Warm the remainder of the milk to a blood heat, not hot or the rennin will not act on the milk, then add the dissolved tablet and the coffee infusion, stir well and put in sherbet glasses to set. Serve with whipped cream on the top of each glass.

Macaroon Fancy.—Select as many large macaroons as are required, with a few sponge cakes. Arrange the sponge cakes or lady fingers upright with a macaroon for the bottom of the little box. Stick them together with boiled frosting and serve them filled with a preserved strawberry and whipped cream filling. A little gelatine may be added to the fruit to make it keep its shape, if so desired.

Let's Be Fair

There has been a disposition on the part of some people and newspapers to emphasize the fact that Schmidt, the murderer of Anna Aumuller, was a priest of the Catholic church. This is quite in contrast to individual and newspaper treatment of Richeson, the Protestant clergyman who murdered his sweetheart. Such contrast is sincerely to be regretted, as the fact of the matter is that Schmidt is no more representative of the Catholic clergy than Richeson was of the Protestant ministers. Neither is the former to be judged by Schmidt any more than the latter are to be judged by Richeson. Both are exceptions and reasoning from exceptions is not only faulty but unjust. Let's be fair.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. In Pen for Brothe.

The sacrifice, Robert A. Cowan, of Brighton, Mass., was willing to make to save his brother, Joseph C. Cowan, from prison, their family from disgrace and for the sake of his brother's unborn child has gone for naught. After allowing himself to be convicted and sentenced to three years in prison for crimes committed by his brother, Joseph, the latter has abandoned his family in Boston, neglected his father and mother and has committed still more crimes in Missouri. He is now under arrest in St. Joseph and has confessed his crimes in Massachusetts. The case is one of the most unusual in the history of Massachusetts and has been called to the attention of Gov. Foss and his council.

The crimes in which Robert A. Cowan were implicated were committed in Boston. He had been home on a vacation and desired to go back to New York to return to work. Having no cash he asked his brother, Joseph, for some money. Joseph responded with two watches and a ring, which he had stolen, and suggested that his brother pawn these and say nothing about it. Robert was arrested after making the pawn and was accused of burglary.

Following the arrest, Joseph urged that for the sake of the family name, his position in society, the feelings of his wife and honor of his unborn babe, Robert allow himself to be convicted. Then Joseph abandoned his people, neglected his parents and refused to pay Robert $3 a week which he had agreed to do while he was in prison.

HOW A MOTOR "TALKS."

The Sympathy That May Come Between the Animate and Inanimate.
"One day my chauffeur was taken ill, and I drove myself in, left the car standing in a side street during the day, and drove home at night," said a suburbanite. "Then, for the first time, I began to sense the feeling of mutual or mutual sympathy, if such an expression may be permitted between animate and inanimate things, between the machine and myself. Several trips by myself confirmed the sensation; then I bought another car for the family and now drive myself regularly in this one."

"I have often thought of the stories told by locomotive engineers in which their great engines are endowed with almost mental faculties. There are enough of them to fill a book, but I never considered them seriously until I began with this car. Sometimes the engine sings; sometimes it purrs. I know its 'sing' and its 'purr.' If anything is the matter with it it tells it in a language entirely intelligible to me. It responds to my lightest touch in all its functions, but once, and here his voice became grave, 'it refused to run into an unlighted ditch where I was trying to steer it. I looked for half an hour for the trouble with the steering apparatus, but could find nothing wrong.'—Suburban Life.

INSTINCT IN PLANTS.

Actions That Seem to Indicate Some Sort of Nervous System.

Plants sometimes appear to possess reasoning power. Charles Darwin instanced the case of the rootlet, which, piercing its way through the soil and detecting a stone or lump of hard clay in its path, will go round it without touching it. "How does the rootlet or plant know that the stone is there?" he asks. "Certainly it cannot see it and as it does not touch it cannot feel it. The avoidance therefore seems to be in the nature of perception of some kind which is a mental operation."

The species of mimosa known as the sensitive plant will contract its leaves even at the sound of a footstep, and when such plant is being transplanted it crumples up during the process in such a way that it really appears to be suffering from fear. Afterward it recovers and resumes its ordinary mode of life.

Plants undoubtedly possess consciousness of a kind which enables them to carry out certain operations necessary to their preservation, and this can only be done through the possession of some sort of nervous system.—London Standard.

Disraeli's Nuptial Joke.

There was a little joke between them (Disraeli and his wife) which I heard from the late dean of Salisbury. "You know I married you for your money," Disraeli would say to her. "Oh, yes, but if you were to marry me again you would marry me for love," was the regular reply. "Oh, yes!" her husband would exclaim, and the little nuptial comedy ended.

But what Disraeli said to Bernal Osborne once about his marriage is much better worth the telling. It was at a dinner party after dinner when the men were alone. "What did you marry her for?" Osborne asked in his characteristic way. Disraeli twiddled his wineglass in the pause that followed this point blank inquiry. Then he lifted his head slowly and looked the other very expressively in the face. "For a reason," he said, "which you could never understand—gratitude." From "Lord Beaconsfield and Other Tory Memories."

Wagner's Music.

By the study of Wagner's masterpieces a glimpse of the eternal is had, and once the vision of his truth fills the soul counterfeits are detected instinctively. The polyphony of Bach and the music of "Die Meistersinger" prove the spiritual kinship of Wagner with the founder of modern music. A Beethoven symphony and the "Tristan and Isolde" music demonstrate the common genealogy of the composer from Bonn and the maker of music dramas, but listen to the Strauss music from "Salomé" when the prophet is being murdered in the well and then hear the mighty tone structure of the last scene from "Götterdämmerung" and observe that Strauss shrieks while Wagner chants.—San Francisco Call.

The Coach and Four Came.

Among the many records of Harrow school is that of a boy, the son of a poor local tradesman in a very small way of business. His schoolfellows often taunted him about his family poverty. Their thoughtless jeers, although hurting his feelings, drew from the lad the retort, "I intend before I die to ride in a coach and four." The years sped by, and, lo and behold, the poverty stricken youngster of Harrow had developed into Dr. Parr, the greatest scholar of his time, whose customary and favorite means of locomotion was a coach and four!—London Mail.

Came Near It.

A New England farmer was once describing in the presence of a very humane person the great age and durability of a horse that he formerly owned and used. "You ought to have killed him," interrupted the humane person indignantly. "Well," drawled the farmer, "we did—almost."

A Gentle and Effective Laxative.

A mild, gentle, and effective laxative is what people demand when suffering from constipation. Thousands swear by Dr. King's New Life Pills. A. Stid, of Mason, Mich., writes: "My whole family depends upon Dr. King's New discovery as the best cough and cold medicine in the world. The world. Two 50c. bottles cured me of pneumonia." Thousands of other families have been equally benefited and depend entirely upon Dr. King's New Discovery to cure their coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. Every dose helps. Senator Was Curious.

Senator-elect Robert E. Broussard of Louisiana is a wiser man now. The geological survey made him so.

Mr. Broussard was one of the first persons to venture out of his hotel after the severe storm that swept Washington a few days ago. On the sidewalks, where he traveled he found thousands of pebbles of many shapes and colors. He noticed among others blue and reddish tinted stones. Believing that the storm had blown such pebbles out of the air or some distant planet, he became curious to know where they came from and whether or not contained precious metals. He saved a handful of them, and without saying anything about his find, took the little stones to the geological survey for examination. He received a note saying: "Pebbles, blown from the roof of a house that was being covered, some painted blue and others red."

Woman Who Got Dizzy

Every woman who is troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility and constipation or kidney troubles should use Electric Bitters. They give relief when nothing else will, improve the health, adding strength and vigor from the first dose. Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., says: "Four doctors had given me up and my children and all of my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, they have done me a world of good." Just try them 50c. and $1.00 at all druggists or by mail. H. E. BUCKLEN & CO., Philadelphia.

Tax and Convict Labor Measure

If the constitution is strictly construed, the two amendments to the constitution to work convicts on roads and to classify property for taxation, to be voted on this November will have to go over until November of next year.

They have not been advertised as provided by the constitution, which requires that they must be published at least ninety days before the date they are voted on and a section of the statue says they must be advertised in two news papers of general circulation. They will be published but it is thirty days less than the time required by the constitution.

The duty of advertising the proposed amendments falls on

Secretary of State Crecius, but but he has so many dates to keep in mind that he became confused

as to the time that these proposed amendments had to be advertised and overlooked them.

Elwood Hamilton of this city,

Secretary of the Tax Commission, called his attention to section

257 of the Constitution which provides that before any amendment shall be submitted to a vote, the Secretary of State shall cause it and the time that the same is to be voted upon to be published at least ninety days before the vote is to be taken thereon in such a manner as may be prescribed by law. The Appellate Court however will be called upon to determine whether or not the word shall be directory or mandatory.

During the last term of court it held in the case of Barksdale

Hamlett against Henry Bosworth that the word "shall" in the constitution is mandatory, and because Lieutenant Governor

McDermott failed to sign a bill which had been passed almost unanimously by both houses of the Legislature, it could not be made a law.

Ouch!

One of those dear lady friends of ours who take a particular interest in other people's affairs got on a car and sat down beside a quiet looking man whose face was badly pitted.

"Why, you poor man!" she exclaimed. "How you must have suffered! How long ago did you have the smallpox?"

"Madam," was the seriously spoken reply, "what evidently drew your attention are not pits of smallpox. I had these put on by a beauty specialist to keep my face from skidding when I eat watermelon." — Chicago Tribune.

Announcements.

Independent Candidate for Surveyor

I. M. GRIMSLY.

For Superintendent.

We are authorized to announce PROF. TOBIAS HUFFAKER a candidate for Superintendent of Public Schools of Adair county, at the November election.

A SUGGESTION ABOUT ROADS.

The people of the county should extend cheerful co-operation in the effort to improve the roads of the county. No plan of working them can show great results in a day or week. It is something that can be accomplished only gradually with the means at hand, but with a fixed system, and a united sentiment and effort, conditions can be vastly improved.

The work should be done according to a fixed plan with unity of purpose in all parts of the county, and not at hap-hazard, as is too often the case.

To this end we should "back up" our engineer in all efforts to get us out of the mud and give us better grades. Give him a chance to show what he can do, and let's help him!

Hon. Oscar Underwood, the leader of the House, has announced his candidacy for United States Senator from Alabama. The passing of his tariff bill will probably secure his election over popular Joseph F. Johnston, the present incumbent.

Only twenty-six days from the date of this paper until the November election. The candidates are busy and it is likely a full vote will be polled.

THE TARIFF BILL.

The new tariff bill which has been engaging the attention of Congress for many months will be in operation within a short time. Its general provisions have been foreshadowed since the Democratic party assumed power, and the business interests of the country are in a measure prepared for the changed conditions which will come.

The party has made good its pledge to revise, and to revise downward, and this is what seemed to be the desire of a decided majority of the people of the country. If it meets the expectation of its friends in reducing the costs of living, and lightening the burdens of the consumer, the great mass of laboring people, it will be a cause for general congratulation for the greatest good to the greatest number should be the leading consideration in legislation.

If this result is accomplished, all alike, irrespective of party, share its benefits.

A feature which will command it to the people at large, is that it requires the wealth of the country to bear a share of the burdens of the government, as the income of the wealthy must now contribute to its support. As it is one of the ends of government to protect property, it is nothing but right, that the arm of government in taxation should reach out to the owners of property, and exact from them their due proportion. This the tariff bill seeks to accomplish by the income tax provision.

This is an innovation in the way of legislation, and, as we conceive, it is a measure of real reform, and a long step on the line of progress.

The Underwood-Simmons tariff bill was signed by President Wilson Friday night and it is the law of the land. The Currency bill will now be pushed through, as it is a twin sister to the tariff bill. Democratic leaders predict that from the operation of the new tariff law there will be a great reduction in the cost of living.

Occasionally we hear the next race for United States Senator mentioned, but not discussed, as the Democrats in Adair and adjoining counties are of one accord—all for Beckham.

From Nebraska.
Powell, Oct., 3, '13.
Editor News:

You will please find enclosed $1 for my subscription to the News, as I remember my time will be up the 11th of this month. We had a very hot, dry summer in this part of Nebraska. There was a rain on the 29th of June, and the next was on the 23rd of Sept., so you see we had it pretty dry. The rivers and creeks were lower than I ever saw them. We had a good, small grain crop here this year, but a very poor corn crop. There will be a large crop of fall wheat sown, but it will be a late one as the people could not get their plowing done on account of the dry weather,

I have been living in Powell since last spring, and have been holding down the post office at Powell, since July the 16th. I was the first Democratic post master in the county of Jefferson, Neb... I will close, as it is getting mail time.

Yours respectfully,
J. H. Grissom.

To the Voters of the 16th Senatorial District.

Burkesville, Ky., Oct. 1, 1913.

Fellow Citizens:-

Being a candidate for the office of State Senator, in the Sixteenth Senatorial District, at the November election 1913, and as it will be impossible for me to see all of the voters in person and possibly many of them will not have the opportunity to hear me express my views on the public questions and which will concern the next General Assembly of Kentucky, I take this means to express to you my views on certain questions.

(1). I favor such laws as promote the happiness and prosperity of the people. (2). Strict economy in all departments of the State government. (3). Abolishment of all unnecessary offices and discharge of all needless employes, which are a drain on the revenues of the State. (4). Constitution provides for levy and collection of taxes for public purposes only, and that same shall be uniform upon all property subject to taxation, hence all classes of property should bear an equal and just proportion of the burdens of taxation. In view of this, the laws of the State relative to the assessment and valuation of property for taxation should be amended, safely guarded with adequate penalties attached to assessing officers and boards of valuation, so that no property will escape taxation, thereby relieving the burdens of the people who own tangible and visible property; in that, the amount of property for taxation will be increased, which with an economical administration of public affairs will permit a reduction in the rate of taxation for State, County and Municipal purposes. (5). Efficiency in management of all State institutions; that is, Common Schools, State University, Normal Schools, Deaf, Dumb, Blind and Feeble-minded institutes, Asylums and Penitentiaries, with strictest economy. (6). Amendment of the Common School laws, so as to relieve the existing evils and promote better Schools. (7). For a more practical road law, with state Aid to supplement national Aid for building Post Roads in Kentucky. (8). For amendment of County Unit law so that it will apply to the manufacture as well as to the sale of intoxicating liquors. (9). For more stringent laws against carrying concealed deadly weapons. (10). For strict laws, safeguarding the health of our people and preventing diseases, but the vital statistic law should be amended so as not to be a burden on the people. (11). For the enforcement of sec. 197 of Constitution which provides for the forfeiture of office for acceptance or use of a free pass or passes from railroads, steamboats or other common carrier.

There no doubt will come, before the next General Assembly, many other propositions, but to my mind the foregoing are the most vital to the people of this State, and upon these questions I submit my claims for your suffrage, and promise faithful service to my constituency, should I be elected.

I shall be glad to hear from you.

Yours very truly,

J. O. EWING.

Puts the Horse in the Background

HEN this car isn't working, it doesn't eat. Not one cent does it cost to keep except when it is actually on the road for you. The horse eats up profit every day in the year, winter and summer. He works for only about six months in the year—and he eats ten pounds for every hour he works. The International Motor Truck divides by two—sometimes three—the time you spend on the road with your horses. The horse tires in six hours' work—the International carries loads from dawn to dark. In speed and economy it wins.

Hundreds of up-to-date, enterprising men in all lines of business today cover distance not in miles but in minutes—because they have left their horses to do the slower, heavier work where they are more profitable, and are doing all their light hauling with an

International Motor Truck

Every modern horse-user, farmer and business man, loses money every year he goes without one. In economy, reliability, strength, and ease of management, it has never been excelled. The wheels are high enough to insure ample tractive power and the solid tires reduce tire costs to a minimum. The motor is simple, with power for all emergencies. Brakes are powerful. The car is controlled by a single convenient lever, and speed changes are made easily and surely without danger of stripping gears. It will pay you to know all about the International. Sensible Women Know Foundation of Health

As health talks to women become more general, both in the newspapers and on the platform, the mass of women are beginning to realize what the most cultivated have always known—that good health cannot be found in a powder box. The externals of health may be obtained in that way, but the basis of health lies deeper, and yet it is just as easily obtained.

The most important thing that a woman can do for herself, and about which she is often most neglectful, is to watch the condition of her stomach and bowels. The weary eyes, the bad breath, the frequent headaches, the pinching, the general air of languidness nine times out of ten are the result of constipation or indigestion, or both. Many simple remedies can be obtained, but the best in the estimation of most women is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is mild, pleasant to the taste and exactly suited to her needs. It is far superior to salts, cathartic pills, waters, etc., which are entirely too violent. Women should see to it that they have at least one movement of the bowels each day, and that the tendency to constipation should take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the small dose prescribed. A brief use of it will so train the stomach and bowel muscles that the form of medicine can be dispensed with. These opinions were voiced by thousands of women after personal experience, among them Miss V. L. Moore, 32 Claiborne St., Nashville, Tenn., and Florence Cook, Lucas, Ky.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to him free of charge by simply addressing W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

Starved to Save.

A life of unremitting toil and frequent hunger, hidden by an appearance of comfortable living, was disclosed in New York City when the report of Appraiser Martin on the estate of Mrs. Catherine Keller was filed. Mr. Keller died last March leaving $11,111.21 in bank accounts. With the exception of $1,500, these bank notes represented the savings, above all living expenses, for a family of three, from the $16 a week earnings of Mrs. Keller's niece, Mrs. Ella A. Cottrell.

In testifying before the appraiser that the bank accounts left by Mrs. Keller were her own savings and to which she was rightfully entitled, Mrs. Cottrell stated she was a niece of Mrs. Keller and had lived with her from the time she was nine years of age. She was a water color painter and did copy work for magazines by day, scrubbing floors by night and on Sundays, but was never able to earn more than $16 a week. From this amount Mrs. Keller managed the household, fed three persons and saved $9,600.

Mrs. Keller occupied a $30 a month apartment to keep up an appearance of comfort. After her death Mrs. Cottrell was so weak that she became insane and was kept in a sanitarium for six months. The bank account will be divided between herself and her daughter.

RATHER GREGSON.

In Fact, the English Hunter Was Sure It Was Quite So.

In the Nairobi club I met a gentleman with one arm gone at the shoulder. He told his story in a slightly bored and drawing voice, picking his words very carefully and evidently most occupied with neither understanding nor overstating the case. It seems he had been out and had killed some sort of a buck. While his men were occupied with this he strolled on alone to see what he could find. He found a rhinoceros that charged viciously and into which he emptied his gun.

"When I came to," he said, "it was just coming on dusk and the lions were beginning to grunt. My arm was completely crushed, and I was badly bruised and knocked about. As near as I could remember, I was fully ten miles from camp. A circle of caribou birds stood all about me not more than ten feet away, and a great many others were flapping over me and fighting in the air. These last were so close that I could feel the wind from their wings. It was rather gregson." He paused and thought a moment, as though weighing his words. "In fact," he added, with an air of final conviction, "it was quite gregson." — Stewart Edward White in American Magazine.

TURKISH STOICISM.

A Very Poor Shot and a Perfectly Good Natural Target.

An incident that occurred in the experience of an English officer is told by the London Spectator to illustrate the calmness and indifference to death and bodily danger characteristic of the Turkish soldier.

The officer, accompanied by a guard of Turkish soldiers, went to the edge of a cliff overlooking the sea to shoot at a seal that he saw disporting itself in the water below.

He fired a good many times, and the last shot had gone very near the bobbing mark when one of the soldiers came to him and politely asked, "Do you not think, sir, that you have fired often enough at Sergeant Yussuf?"

The supposed seal was indeed the sergeant.

Presently the sergeant came ashore, put on his clothes and came up the cliff smilingly. The officer apologized handsomely and blamed himself freely. But Yussuf, like his companions, did not think there was much to be concerned about. After all, the mark had been very small. It was natural to tire at it, it was unlikely that the officer would hit it, and he (Yussuf) had not minded it at all.

When You Are Weary.
Are you weary? Breathe more, eat less. Active exercise will not rest you from mental work.

"When you are tired with mental work," says a well known physician, "do not think you must take active exercise. That will make you more weary. All you need are rest and more air in your lungs. Sit down quietly and comfortably and breathe deeply twenty-five times. Rest a moment and repeat."

"This air forced into the body removes the waste material which makes you weary."

"Don't eat all you want. Food not needed for support of the system is so much extra work for the body and requires more air to dispose of it."

Age of Westminster Hall.

Westminster Hall is quite five centuries old, possibly more, for Richard II., who is credited with its building, was really little more than a repainer of "Rufus' roaring hall," as Pope described it. The hall, so intimately interwoven with the history of England, has, according to Fuller, the distinction of possessing "cobwebless beams." They were, so a popular tradition affirmed, of Irish oak, in which it was impossible for spiders to live and spin their webs. Cunningham tells us that the roof "is of chestnut and very fine the finest of its kind in this country." It was the meshes of the law, if not spiders' webs, one might have looked for here of old, for during long centuries England's courts of law were held in Westminster Hall. —London Chronicle.

Bigger the Steal, Smaller the Crime.
The Manx law of old times had many oddities, but none, surely, queerer than to make the greater the crime the less, because of the impossibility, within the narrow limits of the Isle of Man, that the bigger thief should be successful.

OVER A PRECIPICE

Climax to the Reckless Ride of a Fearless Horseman.

HIS WILD LEAP IN THE DARK.

It Carried Horse and Rider Past the Edge of a Sheer Cliff to a Fall of Two Hundred and Fifty Feet to the Rocks and Water Below, Yet the Man Lived.

Perhaps the most extraordinary fall that a human being ever survived is that described by Thormanby in his "Sporting Stories." The lucky man was Colonel William Yorke Moore, a British officer, who rode his horse in the dark over a sheer precipice 247 feet in height and came out alive! It seems incredible that such a fearful experience should result in anything but instant death, yet here are the facts, which once again confirm the adage that truth is more wonderful than fiction:

Colonel Moore, who commanded the troops at Dominica, lost his way one evening after sunset. In complete darkness he endeavored to make his way home. Two or three times he had difficulty in making his horse cross obstacles, and at last they came to something that the horse would not face.

Colonel Moore was a fearless rider. Again and again he rode his horse at full speed against the unknown obstacle, but in vain. At last, urged fiercely by whip and spur, the terrified animal, with a snort of terror, cleared the low hedge—for such the obstruction proved to be—and went over the cliff.

Colonel Moore says that during his flight on horseback through the air every event of his whole life seemed to pass in a luminous panorama before him. Suddenly there came a terrific concussion, which deprived him of his senses and left him with his legs in the sea and his body on the rocks, apparently dead.

He must have lain there stunned for some hours, for when at last the lapping water and the cool breezes restored him the moon was shining brightly in midheaven, and its beams fell upon the upturned, glittering shoes of his gallant horse, which lay dead and mangled beside him.

As soon as he had collected his scattered wits Colonel Moore coolly began to examine himself to ascertain what injuries he had sustained. He found that he was severely cut about the body and head, that his right ankle was dislocated and that his back was benumbed or paralyzed by the concussion of his fall.

When the sun rose it shone upon his bare, bleeding head with such intolerable heat that, as a protection from its rays, he tied his cotton handkerchief about his forehead. Above his head projected the two ends of the knotted bandage stained crimson with his blood.

After lying in horrible pain for several hours he spied a boatful of natives rowing toward the spot where he lay. As they came near he hailed them in a faint voice, but the moment they saw the ghastly figure of the colonel, with his bloody headress, they set up a yell and rowed away as if 20,000 tides were after them.

After some time a single black man came clambering over the rocks, intent on catching fish. He was within a few yards of the colonel when the latter hailed him. The moment the negro caught sight of the bleeding head and the blood stained bandage he, too, uttered a fearful yell, flung down his rod and line and scrambled off over the rocks as fast as his feet and hands would carry him.

The colonel now began to resign himself to the prospect of a lingering death, but fortunately his English servant, alarmed at his master's absence, went in search of him and, following the horse's tracks, at last came to the edge of the precipice.

The sudden disappearance of the boat prints near the low hedge fence convinced him that an accident had happened. He ran to the barracks and got out a boat, which a party of soldiers rowed to the foot of the cliff.

Very tenderly and carefully the soldiers lifted the colonel into the boat and brought him back to the barracks. For some months he lay in great pain and danger, but in time the paralyzed muscles of his back recovered, and eventually he was restored to complete health. Not even the slightest touch of lameness remained to remind him of his fall.

Use Chloride of Lime.
Next to corrosive sublimate the most effective germ destroyer and deodorizer is chloride of lime. Corrosive sublimate is such a powerful poison that it is dangerous to have in the house. But chloride of lime is perfectly safe and very cheap. There are many uses to which chloride of lime can be put. Among these are sterilization of water supplies and sewage effluents; street sprinkling, flushing of gutters, disinfecting of ail sorts in hospitals, homes, factories and railway cars; the extermination of vermin of all kinds, especially the typhoid carrying housefly.

PAID BOTH

HIS DEBTS

The Chance Came During the Reign of Terror.

A party of noblemen were amusing themselves shooting near Dijon, France. After a shot by the Marquis of Tours, aimed at something seen indistinctly in a thicket, a human cry was heard. The party rushed to the point whence it proceeded and found a young girl of sixteen lying on the ground bleeding from a bullet wound in her side. From the opposite direction a man came hurrying, and when he saw what had happened he took the girl up in his arms and, shaking his fist at the huntsmen, cursed them for what had been done.

"Is it thus that you overrun our peaceful fields, you nobles who never toll, but feed on what we common people produce? And, not content with wasting the fruits of our toll, you ruthlessly shoot our children without taking the trouble to discover that they are not birds. Wait, messieurs! The day will come when we will crush you under our heels!"

"It was an accident," replied the marquis. "Here; take this," throwing him a golden louis. "Were it not for your threats I would make it ten times as much. Come, messieurs. Let us go on."

The party proceeded on their way, but had not gone a dozen yards before the coin was sent spinning past the ear of the marquis. One gentleman, a young fellow of twenty, remained behind. Kneeling beside the girl, he stanching the blood with his cambric handkerchief, then said to her father:

"Let us carry her to her home. I am a student in the Paris School of Medicine. I will see what I can do for her."

Henri Duriac did not leave the home of Antoine Garnier until the daughter, Lizette, was out of danger. Indeed, he alone saved her life. Three weeks had elapsed when the young doctor said to Garnier:

"The crisis has passed. Any physician can now attend to the dressing of the wound."

"Doctor," replied the father, "why have you taken this trouble? You are noble."

"Yes, but I am a man."

"You have given me the life of my daughter. Some day I may repay you."

"I do not need money, and I trust that I may never need your assistance," replied the young surgeon.

Eighteen years later came the reign of terror. Henri Duriac, now Count Duriac, was about to be arrested, but succeeded in escaping across the border. Count Duriac had been married, and his wife and her daughter, Louise, were about to follow him when they received a warning not to attempt to do so.

Mme. Duriac, though beloved by all the province in which she lived, was at last arrested and with her daughter taken to the concierge in Paris.

One day they were led out to be tried. For what? For being of noble birth. A man sat behind a rude table, ready to act as judge and jury to send prisoners to the guillotine. Mme. Duriac and Louise sat waiting their turn, watching the people who were pronounced "traitors to France" marched away to die. A portly man, who showed by his dress and bearing that he was an aristocrat, stood before this self constituted tribunal.

"Your name?" asked the judge.
"I am the Marquis of Tours."

The judge dashed.

"Do you remember, marquis, hunting for birds and shooting a maiden?"

The marquis paled, but said nothing.

"Traitor to France!" said the judge.

"Take him away!"

In half an hour the marquis' head rolled into the basket.

"Next!"

"These," said a gendarme, "are the Countess Duriac and her daughter."

The judge started. "Madame," he said, "you are accused of being a traitor to France. What is your defense?"

"I make no defense. Defense would be useless."

"H'm," said the judge. "Take these women to the little jail in Rue St. Jacques and bring them here tomorrow for sentence. The executioner is too busy today to attend to them."

That night a muffled figure appeared before the little jail in Rue St. Jacques and presented an order for Mme. and Louise Duriac. Throwing a mantle over each to conceal her features and especially her attire of a gentlewoman, she led them through some of the narrow streets in Paris. Stopping suddenly beside a carriage and opening the door, he bade them enter. Not doubting for a moment that they were going to the guillotine, they obeyed, and their conductor mounted the box beside the coachman, and they were driven beyond the barrier. Stopping now and again for fresh horses, they traveled until at last they heard the splashing of waves. Then they were put into a boat.

"Take this letter to Count Duriac, madame," said their conductor, "and tell him that the man who gave it to you may soon be executed as a traitor to France."

The prisoners were rowed to an English vessel standing off the coast and in an hour were sailing for England. Once on board Mme. Duriac opened the letter to her husband and read:

"Count—Eighteen years ago a friend shot my daughter, and a noble saved her for me. I have sent the friend to the guillotine, and I send the noble two lives for the one he gave me."

My stomach was weak, and my blood was wrong. I had backache, and was very weak. I tried several doctors, but they did me no good. I used Cardui for 3 or 4 months, and now I am in the best health I have ever been. I can never praise Cardui enough." It is the best tonic, for women.

Whether seriously sick, or simply weak, try Cardui.

BOILING AN EGG.

If It Gives You Trouble You Might Try John Randolph's Way.

The boiling of an egg seems a simple matter, but many a breakfast has been spoiled and many a temper rasped by the cook's failing to observe the precise number of minutes the process should occupy.

That very original man, John Randolph, is said to have invented a method of getting his eggs cooked exactly to his taste that worked perfectly. As is the case in many country homes in the south, the kitchen was in a separate building at some distance from the house, and servants were plenty.

When the "sage of Roanoke" took his seat at the breakfast table there was a line of servants from the dining room to the kitchen. Mrs. Randolph, the mother of the statesman, held an open watch in her hand.

"In!" exclaimed Mr. Randolph, and the word "in" was passed from mouth to mouth until it reached the waiting cook, who dropped the eggs into the water.

After the requisite number of seconds the holder of the timer signified that the cooking was done. "Out!" went forth the command in like manner, and the eggs were quickly removed.

The system required six or seven servants to cook one egg, but Randolph was accustomed to declare that this was the only way that he could get it cooked to suit him.—Youth's Companion.

AN INGENIOUS CLOCK.

Curious Automaton That Was Made in London a Century Ago.

One of the most wonderful time keepers known to horologists was made in London, England, a hundred years ago and was sent by the president of the East India company as a gift to the emperor of China. The case was made in the form of a chariot, in which was seated the figure of a woman.

This figure was of pure ivory and gold, and the right hand rested upon a tiny clock fastened to the side of the chariot. Portions of the wheels which kept track of the flight of time were hidden in the body of a tiny bird which had seemingly just alighted upon the woman's finger.

There was a canopy above, so arranged to conceal a silver bell. The bell was fitted with a little hammer also of silver, which, although it did not appear to have any connection with the clock, struck the hours regularly and could be made to repeat by touching a diamond on the woman's bodice.

In the chariot, at the woman's feet, there was a golden figure of a dog and above were two birds, apparently flying before the chariot. This beautiful ornament was made almost entirely of gold and was elaborately adorned with precious stones.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

So it turned out that William Travers Jerome, in addition to being a great lawyer and prosecutor, is also a finished gambler, an able poker player and a first-class "crap-shooter" of the old school.—Lexington.

Never Can Happen Again.

The Montenegrin law which ordains that any found valuable shall be placed where the loser can find it reminds one of an anecdote told of Grimaldi's grandfather in Dickens' life of the famous clown. On one of his visits to Leadenhall market with nearly £400 in gold and silver upon him "he found that his shoe had become unbuckled and, taking from his pocket the bag, he placed it upon a neighboring post and then proceeded to adjust his buckle." Having afterward to pay for a purchase he missed his bag of gold and hurried back to the post where he had buckled his shoe. "Although more than three quarters of an hour had elapsed, * * * there it remained, safe and untouched on the top of a post in the open street! That was in eighteenth century London. Could it happen now?—London Chronicle.

A Curious Coincidence.

The story of a queer coincidence was told by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. While traveling upon the continent he visited a certain mountain inn, which was in winter, he learned, occupied only by two men. These men, imprisoned in a waste of snow and ice, had for all that period no communication with the world below. Here was a situation for a novelist! And the novelist accordingly began to let his imagination play about the possibilities of tragedy surrounding the two men on their mountain height. But the story was never written, for, happening to come upon a volume of Guy de Maupassant, which was new to him, he found therein, under the title of "L'Auberge," the very story he had meant to write.

The Herons of Andalusia.

Of all the birds he had studied, said W. Farren in a lecture, none showed conjugal affection in quite the same way as the brown backed herons of Andalusta, in Spain. Whenever the husband relieved his wife at the nest he invariably laid his neck over hers in a momentary embrace and then took up his position while the other bird flew away. The herons never omitted this affectionate salutation.—London Standard.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

Easy Method by Which One Hospital Prevents Their Spread.

The power of a small glass partition to prevent the spread of infectious diseases has been known in the hospitals of Europe for several years, but is only becoming recognized in America. In the contagious wards of the Brooklyn Children's hospital glass partitions about five feet high are placed between the beds. And the effect is really astonishing. In one bed may be a child with pneumonia, in the next one with scarlet fever, in the next one with measles. Cerebral meningitis, diphtheria and other such diseases may be represented in the other beds, but since the installation of the glass partitions no child "catches" the disease that his neighbor has.

And yet the air circulates freely all around and above the glass partitions, and one would think that the germs would spread almost as easily as if these were not there. Yet experience has proved that this is not so.

Physicians are revising their views about the spread of contagious diseases through the air. Some are even ridiculing the fumigation of rooms. The suggestion is that most of the pathogenic germs die very quickly in the air; that persons must come fairly close to the patients and be in almost direct contact with them if they are to "catch" the disease. —New York World.

DRY EYED MADNESS.

No Actually Insane Person Has the Power of Shedding Tears.

One of the most curious facts connected with madness is the utter absence of tears amid the insane. Whatever the form of madness, tears are conspicuous by their absence, as much in the depression of melancholy or excitement of mania as in the utter apathy of dementia.

If a patient in a lunatic asylum be discovered in tears it will be found that it is one beginning to recover or an emotional outbreak in an epileptic, who is scarcely truly insane, while actual insane persons appear to have lost the power of weeping. It is only returning reason which can once more unloose the fountain of their tears.

Even when a lunatic is telling one in fervid language how she has been deprived of her children or the outrages that have been perpetrated upon herself her eye is never moist. The ready gush of tears which accompanies the plaint of the sane woman contrasts strangely with the dry eyed appeal of the talkative lunatic. It would, indeed, seem that tears give relief to feelings which, when pent up, lead to madness. It is one of the privileges of reason to be able to weep. Amid all the misery of the insane they find no relief in tears.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Boy and a Thousand Dollars.

A New York judge gave his son $1,000, telling him to go to college and graduate. The son returned at the end of freshman year without a dollar and with several ugly habits. At the close of the vacation the judge told his son that he had done all he could for him. If he had wasted the money that was to have taken him through college he might as well leave home and make his own way in the world. It was a rude awakening for the young man, but he knew that his father was right. And so strong was the good influence of his upright father that he did leave home to go to work in downright earnest. He went back to college, made his way through, graduated at the head of his class, studied law, became governor of the state of New York, entered the cabinet of the president of the United States and made a record for himself. It was William H. Seward.

Sterilized Soil For Flowers.

It is not generally known that the soil used by florists for filling window boxes and flowerpots is often sterilized. This sterilization is not intended primarily for the destruction of germs, but for the destruction of all animal and vegetable life in the soil, so that weeds will not be springing up along with the flowers and worms uprooting the earth. The sterilizing device consists of a large bin with steam pipes running through it about four feet apart. Along these pipes there are placed holes at intervals of a few inches. The soil—which is sod plowed up and left to decay for a year—is dumped in. Then the steam is turned on for half an hour. At the end of that time the process is completed.—Harper's.

Willie—Pa, why do people talk about the patience of Job? Henpeck—Because they don't know your father, my son.—Baltimore Sun.

Human Nature in England.

We have been so long importuned to pattern after England in things with which England is tiring that the impression is growing that, in matters judicial and in the obliteration of the color line, England must be lifted above human passions and racial instincts.

Then we learn that politics plays a most important part in the selection of judges and that the spoils system, though encased in ermine, still exists in the mother country.

A sublimated Lord Chancellor, raised above human passions, though a Liberal, was selecting all county judges, as we would call them, from the Tory families.

Then he was importuned to retire; he did retire, and now Lord Haldane is doing his duty to his party, and by appointing Liberals to every vacancy is doing his duty to his party and establishing a judicial equilibrium.

Last week we had another evidence that the Englishman is subject to like passions as ourselves, and is objecting to the equality of the white and black races.

"The color line," we are told, "is not often drawn in England, but the Chamberwell poor law guardians declined to appoint a negro as district medical officer, on the ground that the poor were very fastidious in such matters. It was admitted during the session of the guardians that the black doctor's qualifications were better than those of the other candidates, and some of the guardians wanted to treat him as 'a brother.' The majority of the guardians, however, supported Dr. Robert Capes, who opposed the appointment of the colored physician. In doing so he said:

"In plain English, he is a nigger, and as such is not a suitable doctor for a post of this kind. The poor are a great deal more fastidious than people imagine. They would refuse to be attended by a man of color."

Very illogical, not to say brutal, but human. Perhaps life in Africa is affecting public opinion in England.—Louisville Post.
